Regulation

The State Duma demanded to establish unified tariffs for communication and mobile internet for residents of new regions

State Duma deputy Vitaly Milonov has appealed to the Ministry of Digital Development, Communications and Mass Communications and Roskomnadzor with a demand to oblige mobile operators to provide residents of new regions with mobile Internet and mobile communications services on the same terms as all other Russians. Milonov argues that mobile operators claim they do not have their own cell towers in the new territories, although there are towers available. Therefore, the operators need to conclude an agreement with local service providers like Phoenix or Lugankom. These operators should not charge roaming fees when connecting to the Big Three - MegaFon, Beeline and MTS - and the Big Three should not charge these operators for working on their networks. This should be agreed, Milonov noted.

Customer security solutions

MegaFon will help small operators to fight number spoofing

MegaFon has already connected more than 20 regional and virtual operators to Antifrod, a unified state-owned call verification platform. The solution is implemented via cloud technologies of the Russian company X-Labs, which allows other operators to save costs whilst effectively protecting their numbering from spoofing. Since January 2024, approximately 300 thousand calls with spoofed numbers have been detected and prevented in this way.

Social projects

Residents of Orel will take part in an all-Russian football tournament

Children from orphanages and boarding schools will play football in eight regions of Russia. The competition will be held for the 19th time and will bring together more than 2 000 children from 130 orphanages and boarding schools. The competitions are aimed at children's socialization and the development of their physical skills, the organisers say. This social programme has helped more than 900 children find a new home. The initiative of MegaFon employees from St. Petersburg was developed and turned into an all-Russian championship.
